1. The first of these is the question of the propriety of the use of the word "death" in the title of the book. It is a word which is often used in a figurative sense, and it is not clear that it is appropriate to use it in this case. The book is not a treatise on death, and it is not a book which is intended to be read by those who are interested in the subject of death. It is a book which is intended to be read by those who are interested in the subject of the life of the human being, and it is a book which is intended to be read by those who are interested in the subject of the human mind.
